

Gleasondale Local Historic District Questionnaire Results

Starting in 2019, members of the Gleasondale Local Historic District study committee surveyed 49 unique households in the village to ask what exterior architectural features should be regulated by a Local Historic District. The results of that survey are summarized in the table below.

The text below was included in the distributed survey:

“The following is a list of example items that Local Historic Districts are able to regulate when a homeowner plans improvements or changes to their property. A few things to keep in mind when thinking about how a Local Historic District works:

- Local Historic Districts cannot compel a homeowner to change pre-existing features;
- Interior features and renovations are not subject to review;
- Only exterior features visible from a public street are applicable for potential review;
- Residents have the ability to provide input into which exterior renovations and replacements would require review and compliance with the Local Historic District Bylaw.

Please let us know how you would choose to regulate the following items, to inform our process.”

	No Regulation (Homeowner is not required to follow any historic standards or guidelines in exterior renovations and construction)	Guidelines (Homeowner makes voluntary decision to comply with published guidelines for exterior renovations and new construction)	Requirements (Exterior renovations and construction is subject to compliance with historic and architecturally relevant standards in the Local Historic District Bylaw)
